3. Style Clash (sourced, how they normally win)

Alencar path (how she has been winning): Takedowns, top control and the back. She is an IBJJF World and World No-Gi champion at black belt (Wikipedia; UFC.com), all four of her pro submissions are rear-naked chokes (Sherdog), and she held Demopoulos down for 12:38 of 15 minutes. She has been out-landed in three of her five UFC fights.

Rodriguez path (how she has been winning): Volume, clinch work and takedowns over three rounds. All five of her UFC wins are decisions; she lands 4.23 per minute, 29.3% of it in the clinch, and took Knutsson down 8 of 10 times (UFC Stats).

Central tension: Rodriguez's takedowns and clinch against a black-belt grappler. Opponents have attempted only two takedowns against Alencar in five UFC fights, so the meeting point is whoever wins the clinch and the scrambles. Robertson submitted Rodriguez with an armbar from mount after 4:11 of R2 control in 2023.

Orthodox vs orthodox + physicals: Rodriguez is two inches taller with a five-inch reach edge (UFC Stats). Alencar is three years older and returns after 189 days; Rodriguez is back after 231 days.

Shared opponents: Ariane Carnelossi — Alencar out-landed her 60-25 and submitted her in R3 (Nov 2025). Rodriguez led her 40-16 on strikes with a knockdown before being disqualified for headbutts in R2 (May 2024).

4. Optimal Matchup Path (keys — not picks)

For Alencar

- Win the clinch exchanges and turn them into takedowns or back takes.
- Keep the fight on the mat, where 24% of her UFC strikes landed.
- Use top control to offset the volume gap; she was out-landed but won against dos Santos and Polastri.
- Watch the reach: she gives up five inches, and her striking accuracy is 35.7%.

For Rodriguez

- Keep the fight at range and in the clinch on her terms, and out-work Alencar on the feet.
- Use her own takedowns to score while avoiding long bottom position.
- Protect her arms and neck in scrambles; Robertson finished her from mount.
- Keep the pace across all three rounds; her per-round output holds at about 20 significant strikes landed (UFC Stats).

Expectation-break watch: (1) Rodriguez's takedown defence against a world-class grappler. (2) Alencar's striking volume over 15 minutes. (3) Rodriguez's discipline after the 2024 headbutt disqualification. (4) Both are on three-fight win streaks.

1. Early Life and Athletic Background

Alencar was born in Carutapera, Brazil, and moved with her family to Fortaleza at age nine. She competed in swimming and spent seven years in triathlon, along with surfing, skateboarding and capoeira, before starting Brazilian jiu-jitsu at 14 at Gracie Barra (Wikipedia). She later trained at GFTeam in Rio de Janeiro, earned her black belt in 2016 after winning the IBJJF World Championship at brown belt, and moved to Los Angeles to join Alliance that August (Wikipedia).

At black belt she won the 2017 IBJJF World Championship, IBJJF World No-Gi titles in 2016, 2017 and 2021, and the 2017 Abu Dhabi World Pro (Wikipedia). UFC.com lists her as a second-degree black belt and a six-time world champion across the IBJJF and Abu Dhabi Pro. She went to law school but never practised, specialised in sales and consulting, and was a professional jiu-jitsu competitor before MMA (UFC.com). She names Demian Maia, Mayra Bueno Silva and Pedro Munhoz as heroes (UFC.com).

She said her nickname "comes from my strong personality and behavior," coined with her manager Brian Butler (UFC.com). She went 1-0 as an amateur (UFC.com).
